Why we developed these customised awards with Lantra

Most business and management courses lean heavily towards the office environment and employing large workforces, often with a dedicated HR Department.

This is a far cry from the owner / manager scenario with small multi-skilled team of employees who work across disciplines and departments in the rural sector.

Living and working in the rural sector brings with it unique differences in culture and approach to work, business and interpersonal skills, and this suite of courses is tailored to the needs of owners, managers and key employees in Farming, horticulture and forestry and the wider rural sector.

Many traditional business and management courses are college based and require a high degree of commitment and time, particularly when assignments have to be written, so these short sharp punchy courses are designed with the busy learner in mind, no assignments, no essays, just tools and techniques they can apply straight to the business in the rural workplace or farm

ALSO- leading and managing, getting the best out of people AVAILABLE.

The rural Manager -A whistlestop tour of management practices.

This is a 3 day course covering modules of all the above subjects plus leading and managing
